

NEEDED: More Cooperation from Congressional Republicans

Mitch McConnell, Mr. Republican Insider, said several days ago, click HERE, “I think we could do with a little less drama from the White House on a lot of things so that we can focus on our agenda, which is deregulations, tax reform and repealing and replacing Obamacare.”

Several problems with that statement:

- 1 – The “Drama” is coming from the News Media.
- 2 – If there is something to be dramatized it is that Mitch and his buddies are doing NOTHING to stand in support of President Trump. Mitch Baby is as anxious to get rid of Trump as are the Democrats.
- 3 – The Senate has put a full stop on the House’s bill to undo Obamacare, click HERE.
- 4 – This past week McConnell extended the timeline on tax reform, click HERE. There does not appear to be a near-term interest on the part of Senate Republicans for tax reform.
- 5 – The most recent Senate Republican Immigration bill was January 31, 2017. Since then there have been 3 Democrat Bills, none of which resemble anything Trump has in mind, click HERE.
- 6 – The only activity on deregulation seems to be Democrat efforts to slow deregulation, click HERE.

So not only have Republican Senators done NOTHING to stand with Trump while the News Media and Democrats attack. Republicans have taken a holiday from what they could be doing to press forward with Trump’s agenda.

Rush Limbaugh stated this past week that a remedy to what is taking place in D.C. is rapidly falling onto the shoulders of We the People. The day before his statement a well-informed and active acquaintance of mine said the same thing. This person said there was no leadership in politics or else where, other than Trump, willing to take on fighting the no-so-slow fall of our Nation and the rise of socialism.

I agree. But without a leader We the People will have a difficult time surmounting the image of being a Mob. The observation has been made that in spite of our complaints about our elected officials we keep on re-electing them. That is a fact – but then there is no opposition on the ballot who is any better, if as good.

Other than letters, emails, and phone calls to those elected officials exactly what we should, or can, do is not clear. Yes, I know what you are thinking: Lets march to D.C. and haul the SoBs out of their offices and into the brig. Good idea – but you need a leader, a General, who is above reproach. And you need a plan for something that immediately puts into play the morals, values, order, and justice, that undo the mischief of those we put into the Brig. Otherwise you simply have a French-type revolution. You do not have “Revolutionary Management” as Alan Axelrod explained it.

Dear Reader here is the Bottom Line: We need to do something. At the moment we are doing little or nothing. That is a fine way to lose what our Founders, and so many since have lived and died for.
